FIBA ASIA GREETINGS

A very warm and hearty Ni-Hao to our friends, and fellow basketball fans! Welcome to Wuhan!

FIBA Asia is back in Wuhan. Memories are fresh and green on the manner in which Wuhan hosted the 2011 FIBA Asia Championship and the 2014 FIBA Asia Cup. We are sure we will have such a similar memorable experience once again.

The collection of players you will see the 26th FIBA Asia Championship for Women are some of the best in the business. They are certainly the best in their class in Asian women's basketball.

It is indeed therefore a pleasure and blessing that these women stars should be playing in Wuhan. And fans in Wuhan should witness these glittering stars first hand.

Women teams from FIBA Asia have always excelled very well at the international level. And the 26th FIBA Asia Championship for Women will be the perfect index to test the progress achieved by our women's teams.

We do expect the competition in Wuhan to be the best, and deep, so that the champions emerging out of Wuhan will be richly deserving of the place that they will book for the 2016 Rio Olympics.

We expect nothing but the best from Wuhan. Because we are used to it. Wuhan has never let us down and we are sure it will be the same happy recurrence once again.

FIBA Asia too has never let the fans of Wuhan down. And we will never do it. FIBA Asia will stand shoulder and shoulder with the LOC at Wuhan Sports Center in delivering a classy and successful event that it deserves.

We also express my sincerest gratitude to CBA and the staff of Wuhan LOC for the hard work and dedication that they have shown so far and will continue to do so till the event reaches its logical success.

Wuhan is the capital city of Hubei Province, located in the center of China. The world third longest river — Yangtze River and its largest branch the Han River meet here, and they divide Wuhan into three districts, namely Wuchang, Hankou and Hanyang. Wuhan covers an area of 8494 km² with 10.22 million citizens. Wuhan is a historic city built 3500 years ago in Shang Dynasty.

Wuhan is a beautiful city with 27% forest coverage and 74 parks. In blossom season, the so-called "New Flower City" blazes with flowers. There are 166 lakes in Wuhan and 25% of the total area is covered by water. Therefore, the city is also called "Oriental Venice".

Located in the heart of China, Wuhan enjoys a subtropical climate. At an altitude of 23.6 meters above sea level, it has cold winters and hot summers, while the temperature and humidity levels are more comfortable in spring and autumn. There are a total of 116 automated weather observation stations in Wuhan, which establish a "national-provincial-municipal-regional" special meteorological communication network and can provide all-round meteorological services for the Games.

Wuhan is well known as a "thoroughfare to nine provinces" since long time ago. The Yangtze River, No.316 and No.318 national highways and Shanghai-Chengdu expressway cross Wuhan from east to west, while the Beijing-Guangzhou Railway, Beijing-Kowloon Railway, No.106 and No.107 national highways and Beijing-Zhuhai expressway run through the city from north to south. And Tianhe Airport has flights from Wuhan to the main cities both at home and abroad.
